

Dear Lawson Healthcare Customer,

Lawson announced on January 7, 2010, an agreement to acquire privately held Healthvision, a Dallas-based provider of integration technology and related services to hospitals and large healthcare organizations. (Read the full press release.)

We are grateful for your past support, and look forward to discussing how these solutions extend the Lawson healthcare application portfolio and its value to you across your healthcare continuum - including your hospitals, physician practices, laboratories, pharmacies, patients and partners, such as health plans.

The acquisition of Healthvision reinforces our strategy to grow our healthcare-specific offerings to better meet the needs of hospitals and healthcare systems. The market-leading Healthvision applications and technologies, including Cloverleaf™, facilitate the integration of disparate IT applications and technologies providing real-time access to clinical, financial, and operational information reliably and securely, regardless of the source system. With this expanded ability, Lawson is now able to assist your organization with further protecting your existing technology investments, while helping you adopt to future compliance and interoperability requirements driven by healthcare IT reform.

Collectively, the combined organizations now will serve 1400 healthcare customers, including 200 joint customers and 250 customers in Canada.

We are grateful for your business and look forward to expanding your relationship with Lawson. For more information about Healthvision (www.healthvision.com) and what the acquisition means for you, please contact your account executive.

Cordially,

Jim Catalino
